FROM THE DESK OF

MAYOR CHRIS LEH

I love Louisville in the wintertime — the holiday lights, Old Town Skate, and other wonderful traditions. But right now, I am really looking forward to spring. Along with the flowers, exciting changes and new projects will be blossoming here in our community!

As you may have heard, Louisville will soon have a new City Manager! Following a robust nationwide recruiting process, the City Council unanimously voted to offer the position to Diana Langley, who currently serves as the City Manager for Yuba City, California, a city of 70,000 north of Sacramento. Diana and her husband are currently in the process of moving to Louisville, and she's expected to step into the city manager role on March 31. City Council, City Staff, and many residents I've heard from were very impressed by Diana's community-oriented style of leadership and how thoroughly she has already begun familiarizing herself with our community and the issues that are important to us. I am excited to welcome her to Louisville and our City government!

On behalf of the Council and the community, I want to thank Interim City Manager Samma Fox for the outstanding job she has done on an interim basis during the last eight months. Samma's leadership has been invaluable throughout this transition. We are fortunate that she will be staying on as she returns to her previous post of Deputy City Manager.

Our Comprehensive Plan is also beginning to blossom into its final form after extensive community input during the last year. We anticipate that a draft plan will be available for public review in late spring and Council expects to adopt a final plan this summer. To follow along with the project, visit EngageLouisvilleCO.org.

We are also beginning the process of turning into reality our Louisville Downtown Vision Plan, which the Louisville Revitalization Commission has spearheaded and which Council approved last November. City Staff are working on adapting the transformative streetscape improvements envisioned by the plan into the design and engineering documents we need to carry us forward. I am optimistic that we will be able to start on those improvements — which you will hear referred to as the "Front & Center Project" — by the end of this year.

Last but not least, a host of exciting developments are in process throughout Louisville. The McCaslin corridor is beginning to flower once more, with a new King Soopers Marketplace store in the works, Relish Pickleball & Food Hall under construction, and the University of Colorado's redevelopment of the Cinebarre site in the planning stages. Downtown, Birdie Bar will replace the old Sinclair gas station, and the Louisville Grain Elevator has new owners that are working with the City to activate that space. New housing is coming to the Highway 42 corridor with the Delo Boom project, and Ironton Distillery is beginning construction on a distillery and event center at Highway 42 and Empire Road.

Your City Council has outlined ambitious goals for this year in our 2025 Work Plan. Economic Vitality, Core Services, Safety, and Housing are top of mind, along with Equity, Diversity, & Inclusion and Environmental Sustainability as lenses that we view all of our solutions through. To see our full Work Plan, please visit LouisvilleCO.gov/WorkPlan. It is my privilege to serve as your mayor during this exciting time for Louisville, and I look forward to realizing our community goals together!

NEWS FROM

CITY HALL

Louisville's new City Manager: Diana Langley

On January 27, the Louisville City Council voted unanimously to select Diana Langley as Louisville's new City Manager, following a months-long recruitment effort that saw more than 50 candidates apply for the position and four finalists visit Louisville to meet with Council members, City staff, and the community.

“The quality of our finalists was terrific,” said Mayor Chris Leh. “It made the decision challenging, but that’s a good challenge to have. Diana’s leadership style, experience, and insights about Louisville challenges and opportunities deeply impressed the City Council. Our unanimous vote speaks volumes about the confidence we have in her moving forward.”

Langley comes to Louisville from Yuba City, California, a city of 70,000 north of Sacramento where she worked her way up from the city's engineering department to become its Public Works Director and then City Manager. Langley holds a Master of Public Administration degree from National University, San Diego as well as a bachelor's degree in civil engineering from California State University, Chico.

"I am honored to have been selected by the City Council as Louisville's City Manager and am eager to serve the community," said Langley, "Louisville is known for its rich history, charm, and strong civic engagement, and I look forward to working alongside the City Council and staff to continue Louisville's tradition of being a great place to live."

Langley starts work in Louisville on March 31. Look for a more in-depth feature with Louisville's new City Manager in the Summer issue of the Lantern.

As you look around at the many projects around town, you may be asking yourself, "What are they up to?" It's time to vote for our next Pet Mayor!

In 2023, Hops and Arlo made history, becoming Louisville’s first-ever Pet Mayors, a creative initiative launched by the 2022–23 Youth Advisory Board (YAB). After two pawsome years of service, their term is coming to an end — and now it’s time to elect the next pet to lead Louisville!

Your vote matters! Voting opens on Wednesday, March 13 and runs through Wednesday, March 26. To learn more or to vote, visit LouisvilleCO.gov/PetMayor. You must have or create an Engage Louisville account in order to vote. After the polls have closed, votes will be reviewed by YAB, and the top ten candidates will move on to a final round. The second and final round of voting will open on Wednesday, April 16 and runs through Wednesday, April 30. The new pet mayor will be announced at the Youth Advisory Board meeting on May 1.

Questions? Contact Mandy Perera, Youth Advisory Board staff liaison, at MandyP@LouisvilleCO.gov or 303-335-4902.
